Mr. Meares, that the committee on-finance be instructed to enquire, whether a modification of the usury laws may not be made, by which the revenue will be increased and the interests of the debtor class of our citizens be subserved. Mr. Sparrow, in favor of Jas. B. Harding, sheriff of Beaufort.

Mr. Hutchins, in favor of W. L. Pomeroy. Mr. Norwood, in favor of the executor of the late Chief Justice Nash.

Ma Norwood stated it was for the payment of the quarter's salary ending Jan. 1st, 1859. The rules were suspended and the resolution passed and sent to the Senate. Mr. Faribault, instructing the committee on privileges and elections to enquire whether Thomas Settle, Esq., member from Rockingham, is a county Solicitor; and whether he is also, with John Kerr and John M. Morehcad, Esqrs., a trustee of the University; and whether W. T. Dortch and E. A. Thompson, Esq. are directors of State railroads; whether J. H. Foy and R. E. Reeves are postmasters; and whether B. M. Baxter is a clerk and master in equity, and if so, are they qualified to hold seats in the General Assembly.

Mr. Hall, of Warren, moved the resolution be indefinitely postponed. Rejected, yeas 37, nays 63.

Mr. Morehead thought this resolution an expression of bad feeling. This investigation springing up, in the middle of the session grew out of the fact, that the gentleman's colleague had lost his seat. He complimented Mr. Haywood for his able defence, and though, if it was necessary to rake out the House, it was strange it was not done at an earlier period; why postpone it to this period?

Mr. Faribault felt astonished any objection should be made to his resolution of enquiry. He wished to leave a record behind him of their proceedings. It was said, we ought not to waste time and money on this enquiry, but he was for going on as it had begun. The House had decided that minors and ministers of the gospel were entitled to seats, but that his colleague was not. He did not object to that decision but thought others' claims to a seat ought to be examined into. He had no personal feeling in the matter. He was originally against investigation, but now that it had commenced, he was for its continuance until the House was purged. He asked the House to apply the same rule to every man .-He stated his colleague had no part in this business, and after an eulogium on Mr. Haywood, declared it was with the greatest reluctance he engaged in this unpleasant duty, and would rejoice if the gentlemen named in the resolution sustained themselves.

Mr. Kerr declared it never occurred to him to consider a trustee of the University as disqualified. -The gentleman from Wake commanded his respect; he had done his duty as a representative. He was gratified that the resolution was not indefinitely postponed, and that the democratic party had stood up to their principles. He would go for a thorough investigation. Mr. Hall, of Warren, said it was the interest of his constituents to forward the public business. He was not willing to investigate any more. These enquiries had already cost a large sum, and he thought Jerusalem was purged sufficiently. He could not distinguish between clerks and masters, postmasters, county attorneys and those members who had treated or bribed; if all was examined into, there would not be a quorum left. (Laughter.) He was not for wasting his constituents, money in useless investigations.

Mr. Foy was ready to prove his right to set in the House, and felt satisfied he could clearly prove his

Mr. Speer was surprised at the course of Mr. Hall, who had brought forward the motion to investigate his seat, and now was against any investigation.-He was for the resolution of enquiry. Mr. Morehead trusted that no person understood him to throw any reflection on Mr. Haywood. He did not suggest the investigation of Mr. H's claims to a seat, he only followed it up when commenced. He repeated his surprise that this matter should have been allowed to sleep for four or five weeks and now brought forward to take up the public time. He was for going on with the public business. Mr. Masten stated from the journals of 1838, that General Dockery had been challenged as postmaster, but the party then in power would not go into an investigation, and he thought it unnecessary now, and moved to lay the resolution on the table. Mr. Faribault made some remarks in reply. The motion to lay on the table was rejected, yeas 32, nays 72.

Mr. Smith moved to strike out all relative to trustees of the University and directors of railroads. Mr. Scales opposed the investigation on the ground that there was a law against treating at elections, which ought to be put in force. He was against selecting one law and neglecting another, and thought the resolution ought to be amended by including all members who treated.

Mr. McKay moved to strike out the part relative to the Speaker. Rejected. Mr. Settle stated he regretted the resolution, for reasons not necessary to mention. He considered he had a perfect right to represent the people of Rockingham on that floor. He wished to be distinctly understood. He did not shrink from an investigation; but the duties of his office did not give time to investigate a case which had slept for 22 years. While acquitting the gentleman from Wake of any improper motive, he must say he would not avoid the inquiry, though he could not help regretting it. Mr. Dortch had no objection to the investigation, for no lawyer can believe that Trustees of the University or Directors of State Railroads are ineligible. The motion to exclude Trustees and Directors was

Mr. Hill, of Stokes, moved to strike out "privileges and elections," and insert "judiciary." Mr. Outlaw objected, and the motion was lost. A motion by Mr. Gentry was also rejected. The resolution was then adopted—91 to 13. On motion of Mr. Ward, a message was sent to the Senate proposing to go into an election of Trustees of the University on Wednesday. NEW BILLS. - to amend the Rev. Code relative to bastard children. Mr. Moore, of New Hanover, to incorporate the town of Lillington, New Hanover, accompanied by a memorial. Mr. Moore said the petition that accompanied the bill is a plea for education, and emanated from his neighbors and friends. He endorsed its contents. The academy alluded to in the petition is much needed and highly prized by the community in which it is located. The liquor traffic is a grievous obstacle to its success, and the only impediment in the way of its prosperity. The citizens of the village, including every merchant in the place, has signed the petition, which also embraces all the property holders of the community. Mr. M. hoped the petition would be favorably acted upon and the community relieved of a great obstacle to the cause of morality and healthy progress. RESUMED DEBATE OF YESTERDAY. The bill to amend 49th sec. 65th chap. Rev. Code, was now taken up.

A motion to indefinitely pestpone, by Mr. Fleming, being rejected, On motion of Mr. Dortch, the bill was recommitted to the judiciary committee. SPECIAL ORDER. The bill to charter the Greensboro' and Danville Railroad was then read. Mr. Morehead felt embarrassed in his present position, as it was generally reported it was his scheme, and would prove destructive to the N. C. Railroad. The public mind had been strongly impressed that he had a personal interest in the matter. He said he did not seek this Railroad for the sake of the Danville, but for that of the North-Carolina Road

Mr. Morehead then entered upon the merits of the project, which he maintained would be a benefit, not an injury, to North-Carolina. Mr. M's speech was well arranged and well delivered. He left no point untouched or unelucidated which had the slightest bearing on the subject. He defended himself from the remarks of the Register, headed "Treacherous Memory," and complained that two Editors had bandied his opinion about without his opening his mouth on the subject. Mr. M. continued his remarks up to the hour of adjournment, when the further discussion was postponed to Wednesday at 11 o'clock. The House then adjourned.

subject. Every session the Legislature were com-should not be changed; he is opposed to it. (Laugh-Mr. Edney thought the bill gave too much power to magistrates. The power ought to rest with the people, where the constitution left it. Mr. Thomas thought the magistrates a part of the ple, and they surely knew as well as any other class of the people when jury trials were needed .-Mr. T. alluded to the distrust evinced to magistrates and to the amount of unremunerated labor they performed, and he declared them to be, as a class, the equals of the lawyers who attended their courts, morally and intellectually. Mr. Edney saw no necessity for the contrast drawn. He had a high regard for magistrates, and always spoke of them highly, and as a badly paid body of men. Still he did not think the innovation would be justified by even these considerations. Mr. Turner did not regard the proposition as an innovation. The Revised Code now left it discretionary with magistrates to have two or four jury trials in the year. Mr. T. cited instances of unnecessary expenses to counties in having juries without business for them. And he had no objection to the eulogy of the Senator from Jackson-the magistrates were no doubt a very proper set of men-why I believe, said he, the honorable Senator from Jackson is one of them. But if the rap was aimed at him (Mr. Turner,) he could only say that he had nothing to take back as regarded magistrates. No respectable magistrate would object to anything he had said about them. And he had a good deal more yet to say. But what he had said was aimed more at the Legislature than the magistrates.

Mr. Carmichael would support the bill, but he did not think it went far enough. He thought farther legislation would be necessary to provide for the business left on the dockets in the case of a change. Mr. Thomas was glad to find the judiciary committee approving the principle of the bill, and in order that it might be amended he proposed to recommit it. Mr. Houston objected to this system of recommiting bills to the same committee. Mr. Thomas would not insist, but would offer an amendment to the bill.

Mr. Miller pressed for a vote. Mr. Thomas demanded the ayes and noes. The bill was rejected-21 to 11, as follows: For the bill.-Messrs. Ashe, Boyd, Carmichael, Houston, Humphrey, Leach, Mills Thomas, Turner, Walkup and Worth-11 Against the bill. - Messrs. Battle, Blount, Brown,

General Assembly was next in order. Mr. Donnell thought the adoption of the bill would be a sacrifice of the self-respect of the Legislature. In the first place the oath implies the possible election of gentlemen as clerks who would be capable of being bribed. In the next that they would sell an interest in their office, and we here working with them face to face every day. And finally it deprives them of holding any other lucrative office whether it conflict with the constitution or not. He moved the bill be indefinitely postponed. Mr. Houston preferred no bill to this. It might be well enough to have simply an oath of office; but this bill was insulting to the good sense of the Legislature. Mr. Dobson considered it wrong to attempt the imposition of such an oath on the clerk-if necessary for them, then all officers elected by the legislature should be required to take it. The question then recurred on the motion to post-

Mr. Ramsay said the bill involved a judicial question which he would live to get the opinion of the judiciary committee on. He had no objection to the passage of the bill, however, and he disclaimed all reflections on the committee who had reported on the bill. The bill was referred to the committee on the judiciary. ELECTION OF COUNCILLORS OF STATE. The election of councillors of State was now proceeded with, a list of fourteen nominations having been sent from the House. Mr. Turner. Mr. Speaker I desire to ask the Senator from Wake, (Mr. Bledsoe,) if the seven last names on the list were caucused on last night? Mr. Bledsoe. I think, Mr. Speaker, the Senator has no right to ask that question.

Mr. Turner. I have a right, Mr. Speaker-(cries of order) -I am in order in asking the question. Mr. Bledsoe. If the Senator is in order in asking that question, I presume, Mr. Speaker, I shall be in order in declining to answer. (Laughter and cries of "good.") The Speaker thought Mr. Turner out of order.

Mr. Turner insisted he was not. For if the names had been caucused on last night, it would place him (Continued on first page.)
